

Introductions & Conclusions

The Relationship Between the Two

Introductions & Conclusions

The conclusion brings closure to what starts in the introduction.

Introduction

What do we do when we have a problem? Leave it alone? Or try to solve it? Most people say that globalization creates more and more problems, such as increasing the gap between the rich and the poor. However, this difference between people who have a lot and those who have only little is not the result of an intention to increase the income gap in the world; instead, it is a result of how well the First World nations have been managing their economies. In truth, the developed countries have been supporting developing countries, especially by providing jobs and other opportunities so that starving people can survive with dignity. There is an expression that says, if you give a man a fish, you feed him for a day; if you teach a man how to fish, you feed him for a lifetime. This saying illustrates how globalization is a positive force because it supports the lives of the poor with jobs, education, and access to improved technology.

From p. 104, Dollahite, N. & Haun, J. (2011). Sourcework: Academic writing from sources (2nd ed.) Boston, MA: Cengage Learning.

Conclusion

Globalization is essential for people in Third World countries to rise from their present state of poverty. Because of globalization, more people than ever before have employment in meaningful jobs and literacy at all levels is spreading throughout the world. Technology such as the Internet, cell phones, and chances to travel connects people in all countries and help decrease the income gap between 'haves' and have-nots'. The reader is referred back to the expression about teaching a man to fish; globalization provides the necessary tools for the poor to 'eat for a lifetime'.

From p. 105, Dollahite, N. & Haun, J. (2011). Sourcework: Academic writing from sources (2nd ed.) Boston, MA: Cengage Learning.

The Relationship

Thesis

What do we do when we have a problem? . . . There is an expression that says, if you give a man a fish, you feed him for a day; if you teach a man how to fish, you feed him for a lifetime. This saying illustrates how globalization is a positive force because it supports the lives of the poor with jobs, education, and access to improved technology.

Globalization is essential for people in Third World countries to rise from their present state of poverty. Because of globalization, more people than ever before have employment in meaningful jobs and literacy at all levels is spreading throughout the world. Technology such as the Internet, cell phones, and chances to travel connects people in all countries and help decrease the income gap between 'haves' and have-nots'. The reader is referred back to the expression about teaching a man to fish; globalization provides the necessary tools for the poor to 'eat for a lifetime'.

The Relationship

Main Points

What do we do when we have a problem? . . . There is an expression that says, if you give a man a fish, you feed him for a day; if you teach a man how to fish, you feed him for a lifetime. This saying illustrates how globalization is a positive force because it supports the lives of the poor with jobs, education, and access to improved technology.

Globalization is essential for people in Third World countries to rise from their present state of poverty. Because of globalization, more people than ever before have employment in meaningful jobs and literacy at all levels is spreading throughout the world. Technology such as the Internet, cell phones, and chances to travel connects people in all countries and help decrease the income gap between 'haves' and have-nots'. The reader is referred back to the expression about teaching a man to fish; globalization provides the necessary tools for the poor to 'eat for a lifetime'.

The Relationship

Echo back to something interesting in introduction

What do we do when we have a problem? . . . There is an expression that says, if you give a man a fish, you feed him for a day; if you teach a man how to fish, you feed him for a lifetime. This saying illustrates how globalization is a positive force because it supports the lives of the poor with jobs, education, and access to improved technology.

Globalization is essential for people in Third World countries to rise from their present state of poverty. Because of globalization, more people than ever before have employment in meaningful jobs and literacy at all levels is spreading throughout the world. Technology such as the Internet, cell phones, and chances to travel connects people in all countries and help decrease the income gap between 'haves' and have-nots'. The reader is referred back to the expression about teaching a man to fish; globalization provides the necessary tools for the poor to 'eat for a lifetime'.